THE BEEZER INDEX

Introduction

On January 15th 1956 'Beano' comic star Dennis the Menace appeared in a T.V. advert shown during 'Children's Hour' to promote a brand new comic title. This new comic title was the brand new tabloid sized 'Beezer' and when published it became the last of the D.C. Thomson's 'Big Four' comic titles, joining the remarkably successful Dandy and Beano, and its tabloid sized companion title, the 'Topper'.

From the outset in strips such as Leo Baxendale's 'Banana Bunch' and later Tom Bannister's 'Colonel Blink' the Beezer capitalised on the zany goonish humour which had already proved such a huge success in the pages of the 'Beano'. The brilliant comedy strips being complimented by the beautiful adventure strips of Ron Smith, Ken Hunter et. al, in their full colour, oversized magnificence. What more could one ask from a comic?

This index tells the Beezer's story from its glorious beginnings to its sad demise as part of the amalgamated 'Beezer and Topper', thirty seven years later, so if you wish to unearth the history of 'Ginger', 'Pop Dick and Harry', 'Baby Crockett' or 'The Kings of Castaway Island', look no further.

ABBREVIATIONS USED IN THE INDEX

HORNET WILSON

And His EDUCATED INSECTS

HELLO, folks. Get ready to laugh your heads off. Yes. It's yo' old pal Hornet Wilson back again with another barrel o' daffin B's. And me who's going to make a good look. It's a pals. The e HORNEES. The most amazing hornets you ever saw

The trouble was that nobody was coming to see Dad's flea circus. But this Wilson fellow's no dummy bell. And a plane flying overhead so my brain box tickling over.

Next minute my well trained pol-wers blizzing from the hive had work to them

It was in the Spring of 1972 that the Silver family - Slim, Bob and Tess - landed on the Purple Planet and set out to explore it in their amazing machine, the Spacewhacker. As 1 hardened travellers as they were they thrilled at the wonders of this new world with its strange prehistoric like animals and its even stranger green skinned bat winged people.

MR FLIPPY

HOW would YOU like a lodger who was always landing you up to your ears in trouble? That's what happened to the Gray family the moment Mr Flippy came to stay with them. He was a funny little fellow from a far off planet who had been marooned on Earth when his rocket ran out of fuel. And somehow Mr Flippy just couldn't keep out of mix-ups of one kind or another. Take the other day for instance when he was watching Mr Gray tinkering with his car.

Showboat CIRCUS

THE Southern Belle had steamed up to Clatter's Point in the early morning and the afternoon performance of Showboat Circus was on. "Fad's and 'The Belle'" was a fair hit and received a lot of Mississippian interest. "The Belle" was everywhere she went. But not all boats on the river were popular. The pirate boat "Racer Queen" for instance under the notorious "St. Louis" crew.

MIGHTY MIK

OKAY, Mik that's the tent up. Now we're going hunting for our supper. Albert and I will go this way—you go the other way. Mighty Mik, the Stone Age caveman who had "woken up" after being frozen in a block of ice for thousands of years, looked disappointed when Barney Ribbie issued his orders—but no one could really blame the youngster. He and Albert Green had long since discovered that Mik had an un-conny knack of messing up their plans.

And you neither Barney nor Albert could see how Mik could possibly get on a camping week end up on the moors. Nothing could go wrong there. They thought. NOTHING? How wrong could they be! There they were, creeping up on a bunny bunny halet when suddenly—

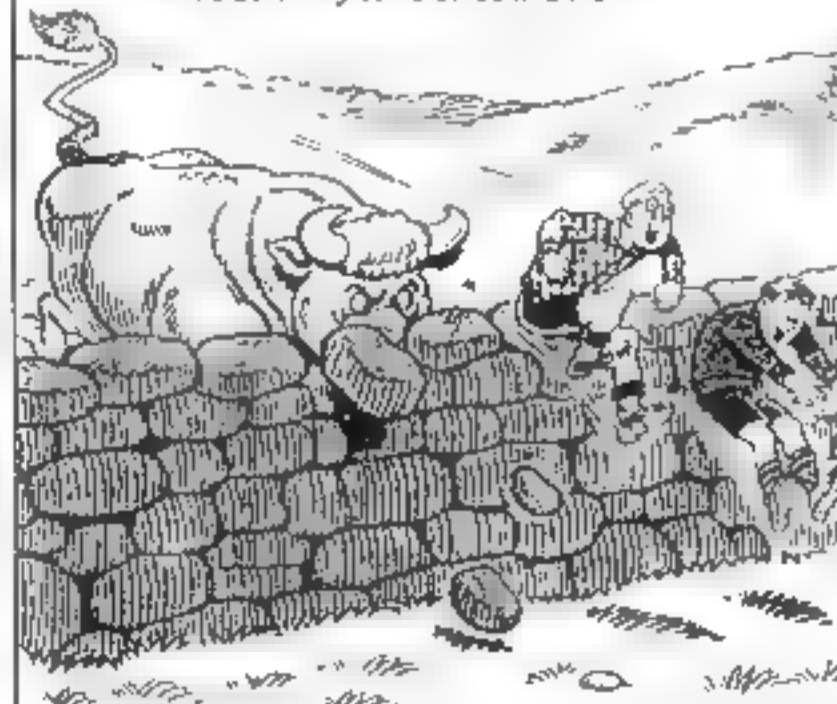

Barney gasped as Mik came into sight. The caveman had been hunting Stone Age style.

Every ready to oblige, Mik lowered his capsize to the ground, and next second Barney and Albert were running for their lives.

Just a time the two pairs leaped to safety. KERRUNCH! Head lowered the bellowing bull crashed into the wall.

THE BEEZER FEATURE PAGES

In the 'Beezers' early issues the feature pages held centre stage in the comics double page centre spread, a position they held for the initial 33 issues, until they were ousted by 'The King's of Castaway Island'. The Features section was then reduced to a single page on the back cover of the comic, where it stayed until issue No.170 when it lost its own page status, with subsequent features being dispersed here and there throughout the comic.

What follows is a list of all the more interesting single features and a complete listing of all the serial features published, whether they were concerned with birds or battles, or how to send a letter to the editor and win a prize.
